Solon hits Nograles for ignoring quorum

Cibac rep says Speaker capriciously didn't see it

By Gil C. Cabacungan Jr.

ADVOCATES OF THE ill-fated Freedom of Information (FOI) bill yesterday claimed there were enough warm bodies to form a quorum in Friday's final session of the House of Representatives but that Speaker Prospero Nograles "capriciously" did not see it that way.

Nograles had cited the lack of a quorum to adjourn the session, docking the bill that would have allowed citizens to elicit official information in state records, including controversial government transactions, that some officials may want to keep confidential.

Rep. Joel Villanueva of the Citizens' Battle Against Corruption (Cibac) said 137 lawmakers were present in the main session hall of the Batasang Pambansa shortly before the House opened its session, at two more than the required number of 135 in the 267-member House.

Villanueva said this was attested to by Majority Leader Arthur Defensor Jr. and House Secretary General Marilyn Yap in informal talks among a few lawmakers.

Villanueva said he and his fellow PDI lawmakers were preparing to celebrate the ratification of the bill—which had already been approved by both chambers but needed to be finally ratified by

THE NEXT PRESIDENT IS ready to be proclaimed.

"I'm back and prepared," presumptive president-elect Benigno Aquino III yesterday told reporters upon his arrival at his family home on Times Street in Quezon City after a six-day break in Tarlac, his home province.

Aquino looked refreshed and relaxed as he alighted from his white sport utility vehicle but remained wary of making any pronouncements until Congress shall have proclaimed him the official winner of the presidential election.

For bucking Moro deal, Mar lost in ARMM, says new gov

By Nica A. Alcaraba and Ryan D. Rosales

VICE PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE Mar Roxas lost in Muslim areas, like Maguindanao, not because of duplicity (winning and vote-buying) but because of his opposition to the memorandum of agreement on ancestral domains, according to local officials.

On the eve of the May 10 elections, Roxas called up Vice Mayor Ismael Mangudadatu of Buluan town in Maguindanao, who was a gubernatorial candidate in the province.

Roxas sought "help" for the balloting the following day. Mangudadatu said, "That 'help,' he said, was in the form of delivering votes for the senator's vice presidential candidacy under the Liberal Party (LP).

"It was very late," he told the senator. "Perhaps, he thought it was that easy to call on my supporters to vote for him."

Mangudadatu, a candidate of the ruling Laban Kampo CMD, eventually won the gubernatorial race. His wife, sister and sons were murdered, along with 32 media workers, in November last year, allegedly by the powerful Ampatuan clan.

By Michael Lim Utac

THE HOLDING OF AUTOMATED elections on May 10 was "mismanaged" because the Commission on Elections (Comelec) and its technology partner, Smartmatic-TIM, did not follow industry requirements, including security features, mandated by the automatic law and the terms of reference of the bidding for the automated system.

The Philippine Computer Society (PCS) issued this assessment on the eve of the expected proclamation of the new president and vice president.

"There are grounds to doubt the accuracy and integrity of results. We don't know whether the vote count accurately reflected correct IDs (election returns)," PCS director Edmundo Canlas said in an interview with the Inquirer over the weekend.

It's official: Rainy season has started

Services Administration (Pagasa) yesterday said the rainy season had begun after a scorching summer that kept the mercury up to as high as 39 degrees Celsius in some parts of the country.

Pagasa chief Prince said that for five days in the past week, weather bureau stations around the country had been monitoring the amount of rainfall induced by a low pressure area and monsoon trough.

Pagasa reported in one of the stations would be able to record 25 millimeters of rainfall—the criterion that would determine whether the rains season had officially started.

Knowing Pagasa conducted its results.

"One out of the eight weather stations was able to comply with the criterion," he noted in the bureau by phone.

In a statement, he said the observed amount of low pressure systems—also known as low lows—in the southern part of mainland Asia had linked with the low pressure area over northern Luzon had generated and sustained the southwesterly winds in the country, dumping rains for days especially in the eastern sector of the country.

"This development signals the start of the rainy season in the first week of June in areas under Type 3 climate, which covers the western parts of Luzon and Visayas," he said.

The rainy season, associated with the southwest monsoon, is expected to last until the end of September.

Monsoon breaks, at periods of one to two weeks, are also expected to occur occasionally during the rainy season.

Flash floods

With the increasing probability of the occurrence of La Niña beginning on the third quarter of this year that can result in above normal rainfall, residents in low-lying areas and near mountain slopes are advised to take precautionary measures against possible flash floods and landslides during periods of heavy rains. This occurred in the mountains.

At 2 a.m. yesterday Pagasa recorded the low pressure area to be 140 kilometers north-northeast of Luzon City.

He said a monsoon trough, an extended low pressure area, continued over northern Luzon, bringing rains to the said area while there would be some rain in the south.

"In fact, there's what we mean there but that could still happen," he said.

Colder temperatures

With the temperatures now expected to fall following last week's daily rains.

On Tuesday, Metro Manila recorded a 32.3-degree temperature, compared to the 33-degree temperature the capital recorded during the summer.

Pagasa's forecast indicated that southern and Central Luzon would experience cloudy skies with scattered rain showers and thunderstorms, bringing widespread overcast across northern Luzon. This could mean flash floods.

The rest of Luzon will have mostly cloudy skies with scattered rain showers and thunderstorms, while Mindanao will be partly cloudy to heavily with scattered showers or thunderstorms mostly in the afternoon or evening.

"Moderns are using satellite viewing from the treatment will prevent overcast and the overall system will be improvement in rain. Light to moderate rain falling from the southwest to southeast will prevail over the rest of the country with slight to moderate rain," Pagasa said.

IT experts list sins of Comelec...

ICT experts list the 105 members, rigging of votes could have occurred on May 10, PCT president Salazar said. "Comelec are responsible."

He cited as example a normal online election system that changes every time for the use of the system. "Comelec are responsible."

All details about the integrity of the results of the polls should have been managed by the Commission and its members, including with the presence of the international law and the technical assistance of the international election system (IES).

Sins

Salazar and Capistrano said that they could be the state of the Commission and its members.

■ Too many delays in the preparation of the Philippine-based International Election System for the Commission to be able to take US assistance programs. The Commission had only been a post, preparing the PCT to work it but it's already a "technical mission," but the recommendation of the PCT was accepted by the Commission due to the technical assistance.

■ Lack of corruption prevention in the 10,000 percent, accuracy of the system, an explicit requirement under the terms of reference of the building. Christian M. Salazar, chair of the Commission technical assistance committee, said last week that there was such a certification from the PCT, but it was not called for compliance with so many "technical requirements," which were not explicitly part of the Commission's PCT and IES.

■ Removal of security safeguards such as digital signatures (Digital with digital keys and PIN numbers) and IV security mark codes (replaced with IV codes).

■ Failure to have an independent review of the results. Salazar said that the security code used by all 10,000 percent of the system was the same one used in the 2009 election in the Philippines.

Salazar and Capistrano pointed to the documentary "Building the Commission's PCT" in the United States to check the accuracy of the PCT machines. It has been proven that the PCT machines under the same PCT, based on the file, switching of electronic signatures," Salazar said.

■ Lack of technical training.

■ Lack of quality assurance in any changes to the PCT.

■ No full manual audit, but only the electronic process was audited. President, vice president, and members of the PCT and IES.

■ No verification of the system. Salazar said that the Commission's PCT machines, which were from the PCT Commission, were not audited.

As early as last year, the PCT had been asking Commission to improve changes in the system, but nobody listened.

In a letter to the Commission on May 13, the PCT sought an immediate meeting with the Commission to discuss the system and the system's security.

The meeting did not materialize, but Salazar said that the PCT machine was in the national university of the Philippines and vice president by Congress in the Commission's PCT machine last week ago.

Audit of PCT cards

Salazar said that the Commission and the PCT Commission, under an international board of commissioners, to order an audit of all PCT cards, which contained software codes and configuration files that were used in the counting, counting and transmission of the election results.

The PCT said it was one of the most critical components of the PCT machine. "It contains the software to the Commission PCT machine, the software to the PCT machine will not, software and calculates the balance and the transmission of results," Salazar said.

As shown by the file, PCT cards can be compared with individuals, contrary to the Commission's process, and the PCT machine.

Solon hits Nograles for ignoring quorum

The House—had been disrupted when Nograles declared a suspension at 10 p.m. but only 100 representatives in the roll call.

"I think the Speaker decided to do it capriciously to make sure that there will be no walk-outs," Villanueva said in his remarks.

They cheated?

Rep. Regino Hontela of the third district, Marikina City, said he was shocked by the Speaker in allowing those who were either absent or did not answer the roll call. "I think they cheated in the roll call. I was there. There could not have been tampering."

Nograles was adamant that there was no tampering.

"The roll is simple. When the roll call is conducted, only those actually on the floor of the plenary are counted for purposes of a quorum. Those who are not in the premises of the complex but not inside the plenary area are not counted and considered absent," Nograles said in a text message.

"This is the rule in all parliamentary bodies," he added.

A senator, who refused to be identified because of the sensitivity of his post, claimed Nograles and the other House leaders were aware that there was a quorum when they started the roll call.

"The necessary quorum is the first adviser in determining a quorum. The Speaker should have been a quorum because other congressmen opposed to the PDI bill (Santiago Reg. Order) would also question his," the senator said.

It was Nograles who turned the question of a quorum into a political maneuver, he alleged, declaring that there was none.

Physical presence

The source noted that while it was true that physical presence was not essential for a vote to be recognized in the roll call, such was not necessarily true in controversial bills, unlike the PDI.

"I think the human line here in this roll call congressmen voted for this bill is very important enough to count it as the House and really it," the source said.

Villanueva said in a phone interview: "The Speaker has a double standard in getting a quorum. If he wants a law passed, he always finds a way. But if the measure won't be his pleasure of mine."

"This is a very grave of much good to watch when only 175 seats were needed to easily pass it," Villanueva said.

Nograles said that by pressing the passage of the bill in the Senate, he was not "ignoring the quorum," the SPC said.

STOP SMUGGLING OF TURKISH FLOUR!

Media reports on pervasive technical smuggling of wheat flour from Turkey are worrisome. It is estimated that at least P50 million in potential government revenues had been lost in 2008 and 2009 alone due to the undervaluation of Turkish flour.

In fact, at least 80 containers of undervalued Turkish flour recently entered the country through the Port of Batangas. The flour shipment was declared as costing only $30 per metric ton or 88 percent lower than the $300/MT average price of imported flour set by the Bureau of Customs (BoC).

We ask:

How can Turkish flour cost only $30/MT when an April quotation for Turkish wheat stood at $225/MT? How can a processed product such as flour be much cheaper than wheat, its raw material?

The Batangas shipment, brought in by a single importer, resulted to foregone government revenues amounting to some P4.6 million.

We demand a stop to the smuggling of Turkish flour, and urge that sanctions be meted out over the apparent inaction of BoC and Department of Finance officials on the matter.

Likewise, we demand that the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) make good on its pledge to subject Turkish flour to more rigorous tests after an initial test showed it had traces of cancer-causing aflatoxin.

Pending the result of further tests on Turkish flour, further imports should be suspended immediately.

Senator Aquilino Pimentel, Jr. himself said that our government must not play "Russian roulette" with our people's health and safety as its duty is to ensure that the public consumes only untainted food, in this case bread and noodles free from aflatoxin and other carcinogens.

We ask again:

Just like the small nicotine content of cigarettes which, nonetheless, causes cancer in smokers, would the aflatoxin content of Turkish flour not make our people ill or worse, be stricken with cancer, through the repeated consumption of bread and noodles made out of such flour?

PROTECT the CONSUMERS from CANCER-CAUSING FLOUR.

Barrios ready to step down

Salud looms as new PBA chief

By Hwang K. Castillo

LIKE A TRUE, LOCAL SOLDIER, HONORABLE "Barrios" Barrios yesterday announced he is ready to leave the reins of the country's pro basketball league to a new boss.

Breaking his silence for the first time since word of his possible replacement cropped up last week, the Philippine Basketball Association commissioner said he is actually looking forward to his retirement, adding he has been performing his duties well.

"Honestly, we believe that we are not doing poorly during our watch," Barrios told reporters in an impromptu press conference at the Resorts Colonades, where he appeared to gather with the newly appointed league commissioner, former Colon-Island, for the first time.

"I am going to step down. It is not because of performance," added Barrios, who was appointed commissioner in the wake of the 2009 season. "The PBA is just a profit center and that is the business of giving every owner."

GSIS poises suit against Finance execs

Planned sale of 100-hectare FTI complex

By Michelle K. Barro

CEBU CITY—THE OUTGOING CHIEF OF THE Government Service Insurance System (GSIS) has threatened to file a complaint before the Ombudsman against officials of the Department of Finance over the planned sale of the government's 100-hectare property in Tagaig City.

GSIS president and general manager Winston Gadea alleged that the move of the DOF to sell the 100-hectare property in Tagaig City is a breach of the property which belonged to the GSIS but had been illegally submitted as offer to sell to a private firm to buy the property for P7 million. He said GSIS was willing to buy it in cash. However, he lamented that the DOF considered the offer too low and moved to sell.

Gadea said officials led by Finance Secretary Margarete Lim were selling a private sector firm to buy the property even at a slightly higher price than the P7 million offer of GSIS to avoid controversy.

"We (GSIS) submitted our offer way earlier. Why would they reject our offer with another party without first negotiating with us?" Gadea said. He noted that GSIS would have been willing to make its offer flexible.

"What is the difference between our GSIS's money and that of the private sector? The only difference is that we are a state-owned enterprise and the private sector is not. The private sector should not be subject to audit by the COM Commission."

Wall St. plunge seen weighing down stocks

A WEAK OPENING IS EXPECTED for local stocks this week following Friday's volatile New York stock market. Analysts predict a sharp decline by Friday, the end of the week of a European bond crisis.

Though there is disagreement on whether the market will be weighed down by the S&P 500's loss of 1.5 to 2 percent, the local stock market is expected to be weighed down by the S&P 500's loss of 1.5 to 2 percent.

Analysts note on Friday after a sharp rise from Friday's volatility, the market is expected to be weighed down by the S&P 500's loss of 1.5 to 2 percent.

Last week, the main index Philippine Stock Exchange index gained 3.21 percent to 3,267.36 as investors had been wary about the introduction of a new President as well as follow-through buying inspired by good news from the US.

THE POWER SUPPLY SITUATION IN Mindanao is expected to finally stabilize by next July as the hydroelectric power plants on the island begin to generate. Major companies due to the start of the rainy season, according to the National Grid Corporation of the Philippines.

Statements from the NGCP showed that the Agno and Pinalag hydroelectric power plants were generating 280 megawatts

(MW) as of last Friday, up from 200 MW in early May.

NGCP said this was due to the increase in the water elevation in Lake Linao, which stood at 99.07 meters above sea level (m) as of last week. However, this was still below the critical level of 99.33 m.

For the hydroelectric facilities to generate at their maximum capacity, the water level in Lake Linao should be more than 99 m, NGCP added.

The growing capacity of the power plants as of last Friday was an improvement compared to that of the year-earlier months when three hydroelectric facilities were generating only 60 to 100 MW, or about 10 percent of the island's total capacity of 694 MW.

With more electricity being produced, the power supply deficit in the Mindanao grid has fallen to 250 MW as of June 5, down from the NGCP stated. This was an improvement compared to the huge supply gaps that reached more than 500 MW a few

Is mining growth inclusive?

DID YOU KNOW THAT WITH the wealth lying in our country's abundant mineral resources...placed at around $42 trillion—we can fund the entire government's current level of expenses for 30 years? Or can we?

For our total public debt measured from 1870 to 1997, the country is considered the fifth most mineral-rich in the world, having 9 million hectares of mineral-rich lands with established reserves of 13

Known metallic and 29 non-metallic minerals spread across the country. Pb ore is primarily located globally in the third tier, followed by gold, bauxite, iron, copper, lithium, and nickel in chromite deposits.

Growth driver

It is with this knowledge that mining proponents have been pushing for all-out development of the industry, and seeking assistance from environmental groups. Although mining firms have long been eager to get a piece of the action, the current government has made it its policy to actively lobby domestic and foreign governments in the industry. It is now, indeed, the country's hope to get out of poverty (see Table 1).

No FREE LUNCH
C. DeWitt C.
Munich

The mining industry defied the slowdown and surged by more than 21 percent. As such, it was the fastest growing industry in the Philippine economy in 2009.

Non-inclusive growth

With the economy's recent growth having failed to translate into commensurate job generation and poverty reduction for Filipino families, simply achieving high rates of economic growth can no longer be good enough. In-depth discussions underscore the need for us to pursue both high and inclusive growth, which the Asian Development Bank (ADB) de- fines simply as growth with social consequences.

Can history provide growth and its outcome as well? Will there be broad participation in and benefits from the industry's rapid growth? Answering these requires answering (1) how much employment would result from growth in the industry and (2) how much output growth would spill over to other industries in the economy through its backward and forward linkages. Thus, it is how much of other domestic industries depends on steel directly or indirectly by means of backward linkages), and how much of its output is used directly as inputs by other domestic industries (backward linkages).

Because foreign companies are prohibited of not dominant in mining, can they additionally rule? How much of the wealth created by the industry will actually accrue to Filipinos?

Weak Linkages

The Input-Output Table of the Philippine economy produced by the National Institute of Economics shows that food is the most important export commodity. This is a stark reminder how much of a staple (and its) contents are used as inputs by other industries. That is, the export of food is not just a sale of a commodity, but a sale of a commodity that is used as an input by other industries. In fact, the food industry accounts for 23.7 percent of the value of consumption, or 23.7 percent of the value of the economy. The food industry is the most important industry in the economy, accounting for 23.7 percent of the value of consumption, or 23.7 percent of the value of the economy. The food industry is the most important industry in the economy, accounting for 23.7 percent of the value of consumption, or 23.7 percent of the value of the economy.

RP joins list of countries targeted by cyber attacks

Kaspersky: Malicious software used to steal sensitive info

By Paolo S. Platonillo

MANILA, CYBER—THE RISE of anti-cyber crime legislation in countries in the Asia-Pacific region has increased the risk of computer users in the Philippines falling victim to worldwide crimes.

Malicious software that can steal sensitive information... including credit card numbers and e-mail passwords... that can be used to access bank accounts and other financial information has become more prevalent in the age of the Internet.

Top 28 countries

In its first quarterly report on information security threats, Russian-based computer security company Kaspersky Labs said in a report that the Philippines, where more and more financial transactions were being done on electronic platforms like mobile phones and e-mail, was among the top 28 countries targeted by cyber attacks in the first quarter of the year.

Also in the top 28 countries were the US, and one of the leading Asian nations.

Malware, the report said, about 1.11 percent of all cyber attacks targeted financial data would be directed in the Philippines.

"A quarter of the most targeted countries are located in Asia, where the Internet is developing at a rapid pace," Kaspersky said in its report.

On top of that, "legislation and law enforcement agencies aren't always able to keep up with the speed of development."

"Countries that with the deteriorating economic conditions and the market is a breeding ground for cyber criminals," the report said.

Other Asian countries on the list are China, which topped the list, Taiwan (ranked 50), Malaysia (70), Thailand (118) and Indonesia (200).

In the Philippines, anti-cyber crime legislation is still pending in Congress. The latest chamber passed House Bill No. 4754, which was co-authored by 21 representatives, on the floor and final reading in January.

Kinds of attacks

LIBEL. PH. PHOTOGRAPH A FEW days ago, there has been a resurgence of media attacks on the PLS-500 project in its second the money in Cebu to one that could accommodate bigger aircraft and its every week those investment drivers in Cebu airport every time the island shows the wrong way.

That the onslaught did come—via an issue that "old news" and a few other news items in various national publications—was not surprising. What was surprising was the timing of the attack, coming on the heels of San Miguel Corp.'s acquisition of a 50-percentage stake in the consortium on developing the project.

According to our sources, the media campaign anchored on supposedly environmental concerns was being managed by a low-key public relations practitioner who has a substantial budget in order to maintain accuracy and discipline among his contacts.

More importantly, we learned that estimates had been propped up, asking that it keep out the masses of a real airport project on a nearby island shown at the same time the airport's strategic com-

Where is the love?

THE 2009/2010 that led to the opening of almost half a century of the famous Liberty Plaza Mills and 25-based Liberty Mills Inc. to—no more dispute—go—all about the money. In particular, it is about the reputation that Liberty gave to General Mills for the right to produce and sell the latter's Gold Medal brand locally.

According to our sources, General Mills started Liberty to go higher revenues (over 2 percent to 5.5 percent during their last contract negotiations five years ago), Liberty real-estate profits and paid up. The most recent round of negotiations, however, proved to be a shock in the management of the Filipino firm. General Mills apparently saw them a dark domain reflecting the contract period from five to only three years, and further raising the royalty rate to 8 percent.

So longer holding the love from their crumbly US partners, the Liberty Plaza gave decided to simply walk away—much to the surprise of some General Mills managers, Brian J. Lewis.

The next BSP chief?

THOUGH it is still a mere year before the term of incumbent Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas Governor Amador "Ago" Tinglasan Jr. expires, talks are already in who prospective President-elect Benigno "Ninoy" Aquino III will likely pick to the country's chief monetary authority and banking regulator.

Sources who claim to be "in the know" say that one of the strong contenders is Amador Montalano III, president of Bank of the Philippine Islands, who is hitting the retirement age of 60 (Aquino, suppose) in one point. Although he didn't have to seek employment since when given his family's wealth since before (the Montalano own BPI and Southeast Asia Cement), he chose to become a professional manager working for the banks. With his ties to the anti-Bankers Association of the Philippines (BAP) president to become the top banking regulator after the late Rafael Bragado (senior) term up it is no longer realistic that he will accept a high level public service as "it runs in the family." But old man was not a necessity of 8 percent. Of course it would have been a different story if Montalano had been the presidential son.

The same Aquino siblings are also suggesting the appointment of Tinglasan, who would then be the first governor to get a second term since the now 64-year-old was passed. Under his leadership, the BSP passed an array of tough banking reforms initiated by his predecessor. And it was due to these reforms that Philippine banks had emerged relatively unscathed from the 2009 financial crisis.

Wall Street still shaken by weak US data

A BROKER appears to be affected by nerves from the trading floor of the New York Stock Exchange. The drop in the Dow Jones industrial average last Friday was the third-worst slide of the year.

Headline-driven market said to drive massive sell-offs

NEW YORK—WALL STREET WORKED TO LIMIT ITS LOSSES over the past week amid worries about economies in Europe and China, but Friday's weak US job numbers hit home, leaving shaken investors in need of a tonic.

"This is a headline-driven market environment," said Frederic Dickson, chief market strategist at DA Davidson & Co. "Market headline news can drive investor upward market moves just as easily as negative headline news drives market sell-offs."

All three major indices capped the holiday-shortened week Friday with plunges of more than 3 percent in response to the worse-than-expected jobs report. The markets on Monday are closed.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average closed at 19,911.23, down 3.89 percent from last Friday.

The tech-rich Nasdaq composite fell 1.64 percent over the week, to 5,229.17.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index, a broad measure of the market, lost 2.22 percent at 1,864.88.

"In the world of risk, it was looking like the US economy was going to heat up to be the more stable, but with a job report that disappointed expectations," said

Buyout barons eye Nielsen's $1.75-B IPO

NEW YORK—JENSEN'S PLANNED $1.75 billion IPO will be heavily watched by its more demographic investor base.

Six private equity firms—including investment firms B&B, Blackstone, Carlyle and T&L—own the business, which dominates the market for trading tools viewings.

The question is whether the new Nielsen can attract similar audience numbers from stock market investors.

If it can, the business led by former Nielsen Executive member David Calton may chalk up its next round of its current investors. They injected about $1 billion of equity into the $10 billion beyond the Dutch-based business formerly called ISI.

An IPO that comes close to doubling their money would help help attract financial buyers from the trading world's largest financial engineers.

That's not an unreasonable goal. Under Calton, the company has doubled its assets, focused on its own ratings business and acquired two rivals. Adjusted earnings before interest, tax, depreciation and amortization rose to $1.25 billion last year from $675 million four years ago. Revenue has grown about 2 percent annually since 2012.

Moreover, as the industry standard for television and cable ratings information, Nielsen has traditionally operated a business with high margins in cash. And its professional development business is well-run, accounting for just around 17 percent of revenue.

But media ratings battle are changing. Competitor companies, for instance, is better positioned to measure eyeballs gathering in online media like YouTube and Facebook.

In its prospectus, Nielsen also notes the risk that multiple competitors are looking to measure TV audience digitally using web-enabled set-top box technology.

Given these risks and opportunities, what's Nielsen's market?

At 11 times EBITDA, a hefty 20 percent premium to G&P of Germany and less of France to reflect Nielsen's dominant position, the company would open a $14.5-billion enterprise value. For all that, that's just under $6 billion for the expected—nearly doubling the company's investment.

US financial stocks turn more volatile

STOCKS NEW YORK—FINANCIAL STOCKS may face more volatility in coming weeks as a sweeping overhaul of the US financial industry looks on course to reality.

Options investors may then see several strategies in play as the pending financial regulations, ranging from the conservative to the speculative.

"There has been concern that the pending congressional reauthorization bill would have further dampened pressure on the financial sector before the fourth of July holiday weekend," said John Pallone, director of legislative investment strategy at broker-dealer RBC Capital Group in New York.

The sector has fallen more than the broad market in the last several weeks. The S&P Financial Index is down about 13.6 percent since April 24, more than the S&P 500, which is down 13.7 percent in the time.

Volatility in exchange-traded funds that track the financial sector also rose over the past month.

The legislation is being shaped into final form by a US Senate House panel, and with the final language in the bill not announced, it leaves open the possibility of surprises for investors.

EU woes may curtail US luxury expansion

Few brands seen to lean on stronger dollar

NEW YORK—MCKINSEY QUANTILY plans for top US luxury brands may stall in the short term over fears of a weakening dollar and weaker consumer confidence.

Some of those American names including Louis Vuitton, Gucci, Prada, and others are going to go through in the next six to 18 months, I think, will be dramatic, it will impact France, Germany and the United States. American brands will be in a bit of a bind, but I don't think that that's a very long-term problem.

Franchising industry sees 30% growth in 2010

By Attilio L. Ho

THE LOCAL FRANCHISING industry expects sales to grow by more than 20 and 30 percent this year to as much as P157 billion, driven by key economic prospects and high consumer confidence.

Banking, food services, education, health care, and other sectors are expected to show strong growth, with the banking industry leading the way in 2010.

The 1,000+ franchise units in the Philippines, which saw a 10 percent increase in 2009, are expected to show a 30 percent increase in 2010, according to the International Franchise Association (IFA).

Attilio L. Ho, president of the IFA Philippines, said that the industry is expected to show a 30 percent increase in 2010.

Ho said that the industry is expected to show a 30 percent increase in 2010, driven by key economic prospects and high consumer confidence.

This would not only expand the market for franchise units, but also create more jobs for the franchisees and their employees, he added.

BSP expects lower inflation this year

By Michelle V. Reyes

THE DEPARTMENT OF ECONOMIC PLANNING expects inflation to fall below 5 percent this year, down from 6.5 percent in 2009.

The BSP also cited a slower rate of increase in money stock, which is expected to be 10 percent in 2010, down from 12 percent in 2009.

"Lower monthly [inflation] projections showed some downward trends relative to the projections we made in April," said BSP Deputy Governor Maria Colapinto.

The National Statistics Office reported last week that the year-on-year inflation rate, which measures the increase in prices of goods and services consumed by average Filipinos, settled at 4.5 percent in May, down from the 4.4 percent in April.

Earlier this year, the central bank said the annual inflation rate could move up just the 6-percent mark in the third quarter amid rising demand, which lowered more favorable consumer and business sentiments.

However, Colapinto said inflation was now seen to be slower than earlier anticipated in the impact of the monetary measures recently implemented by the BSP has started to kick in.

He also cited the strengthening of the local currency and the decline in international oil prices, which largely offset domestic prices. The country imports the bulk of its oil requirements.

The appreciation of the peso, which has risen to the 48-to-a-dollar region—minus imported goods shortages, thereby pulling down domestic inflation.

For the entire year, the BSP now expects inflation to average at 4.7 percent, slower than the earlier forecast of 5.1 percent.

The central bank also reduced its inflation projection for 2011 from 5.7 to 5.0 percent.

Some of the measures made by the BSP earlier this year to curb inflation to check the two reductions in the budget for refinancing—first from P60 billion to P40 billion, and further to P20 billion.

Earlier the strengthening liquidity of the central bank, banks may borrow an amount equivalent to the discounted value of their securities, which will serve as collateral.

The BSP likewise raised the interest rate charged for discount loans to equal the overnight borrowing rate, which currently stands at 4 percent. Previously, discount loans were charged at interest equivalent to 50 basis points below the overnight borrowing rate (the rate paid by the BSP for overnight deposits by banks).

These measures are expected to keep the average growth of money supply this year to between 10 and 12 percent, which the central bank considers to be moderate.

As of mid-March, money supply, or M2, stood at P1.3 trillion from a year ago.

Consumer loans rose 8% to P413B in first quarter

By Michelle R. Bello

CONSUMER LOANS INCREASED by 8 percent, accompanied by a similar growth in the first quarter from a year ago, which the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas said would help sustain the economy's recovery throughout the year.

Documents from the BSP showed that outstanding loans for consumers—including auto, housing and credit cards—amounted to P413 billion at end-March, up 8 percent from P386 billion of the same period last year.

Bank regulators said the increase in consumer loans was consistent with the improving confidence of banks to local small businesses and an economic recovery this year from last year's slowdown. They said consumer loans are more confident to take on loans as the expected recovery may turn to reality, if not improve, their economic outlook.

The move of banks to extend more loans to individual consumers, however, led to an increase in their exposure to bad debts. The ratio of non-performing consumer loans to the total amounted to 9.4 percent as of end-March, up from 8 percent.

The BSP also reported that nonperforming consumer loans accounted for 26.8 percent of the banks' overall nonperforming loans, up from 26.2 percent in the same period last year.

Loan delinquency by individual borrowers was normally less in amounts that by corporate borrowers, which tag bigger loans from banks.

By type of consumer loans, the biggest amount extended by banks was to real estate, particularly residential properties. These loans accounted for 40.3 percent of P413.2 billion of total consumer loans created by banks.

Credit card loans were the second biggest form of consumer loans at P130.2 billion, accounting for 31.4 percent of the total.

Auto loans amounted to P99.6 billion, or a 24 percent share, while other types of consumer loans (which include personal loans and educational loans, among others) accounted for P73.2 billion at 8.4 percent of total consumer loans.

The BSP said the increase in consumer loans helped prop up consumption, which was one of the key drivers of the robust growth of the economy in the first three months.

The economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, gave 7.3 percent in the first quarter, accelerating from a meager 4.5 percent in the same period a year ago.

The fastest growth in the first quarter followed that the economy had posted since the recovery from last year's slowdown, which was blamed on the global economic turmoil led by recession in the United States and Europe—one of the biggest export markets of developing countries like the Philippines.

Economic managers said the Philippines was poised to grow much faster this year than last year's 4.1 percent.

The government has set an economic growth target of between 7.4 and 8.6 percent this year, but officials are considering to raise this following the robust expansion in the first quarter.

EDC seeks $325M in loans

By Atty. R. Bello

ENERGY MOVEMENT CORP. (EMC), the country's largest producer of geothermal energy, is seeking $325 million in loans from foreign banks and a multilateral institution to help finance mounting obligations and other capital expenditure projects.

Industry sources said that about $175 million of the loans would come from three foreign banks—Credit Agricole, Standard Chartered Plc and Amersfoort and New Zealand/Standard Group Ltd.

"Proceeds will be used primarily for the financing of the Marikina II (yet to be) and to build a 20 MW unit, equivalent to about P12 million," the source said.

The source added that part of the amount raised also can be used for the company's expansion and geothermal power projects and said it because the acquisition of the 100-megawatt (MW) Power Marikina (Marikina) geothermal power plant.

EDC, through its wholly owned subsidiary EDC-Marikina Inc., submitted last month the highest bid of $22.25 million for the Marikina geothermal power plant package. It has not yet received a contract for the project.

According to the source, EDC was just awaiting the approval of the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas before it could tap the loan facility.

Meanwhile, the remaining $200 million will come from International Finance Corp. and other bilateral sources, according to documents from the World Bank said.

IFC documents showed that the company, which is an existing IFC client in good standing, was seeking a lower EDC investment of up to $75 million and a potential mobilization of another $25 million from bilateral sources.

"Proceeds from the loans would be used to partially finance the company's ongoing commercial expansion plan," IFC said.

"EDC is the largest company currently utilizing geothermal sources of energy in the Philippines, that can support self-provide critical additional resources of an appropriate level to help develop projects in the geothermal energy sector and thereby help the country move toward greater reliance on private markets of growth in the sustainable infrastructure sector," the documents said.

Mindanao power supply seen ...

Two-page B1

Since the beginning of the year, the Mindanao grid, which feeds the Luzon and the Visayas, had been experiencing power supply shortages, which resulted in brownouts during some hours to as long as 12 hours daily.

The shortages were due to the completion of the Mindanao grid, which is a maintenance work on power plants that maintained electricity, and the 11 to 12 day spell, which drastically cut the generating capacities of hydroelectric power plants.

Mindanao, which houses about half of its electricity requirements from hydro resources, was hit hard by the prolonged drought and had to rely heavily on diesel-led plants to supply additional power.

These led facilities included Southern Philippines Power Corp.'s 55 MW Isabela C Power plant located in Isabela and Western Mindanao Power Corp.'s 300-MW Isabela power plant in Isabela.

black, white and red stripes, but also of blue-black painted foliage framed windows.

The ceiling was originally painted in four yellow and gold panels, its columns to rest with gilded capitals and leaves. The polychrome had once been decorated with rings of foliage in red, yellow and gold leaf, and the columns by the entrance were painted to resemble Corinthian capitals.

Original brick

Modern fixtures were dropped away to get to the rare white-floors of the chamber and to slowly build back the original finish, layer by layer. Mrs. Peracio, lighting expert, designed and installed a lighting scheme of "cove" lights that emit warm-toned light and use the least amount of energy.

A 19th-century painting at the hospital's altar was taken down to allow restoration of the visible original brick, revealing an otherwise-often-painted underpaint, a painting in wood stain of the figures of Christ, possibly of the same period as the Carthusian monks.

A double layer of balustrade and 18 paintings of Christ, the apostles and Transfiguration inside the sacristy's church door. In its small windows, the heavily stained paintings are now in such cases of the art, low-energy lighting that emits warm-toned light to prevent damage to the paintings.

Painted and preserved through the years, the main altar's original brick required major work for it to be uncovered. Brick began on the drone of the central niche holding the Virgin's image.

With about 2 cm of plaster, paint, successive plasters and other material, however, restored now removed, the original remaining brick has been discovered. It turned out to consist of red gold leaf, blue for the back, green and yellow for highlights that have now been removed with 22-karat gold leaf.

The partly removed hospital and the new dome and candle tower lights were carefully moved over by the Cobles de la Inmaculada Conception to the Order of the Franciscan Missionaries (OFM) in a column room, many thanks to the 2, 2009.

The Franciscan Order agreed to adapt and accept and Commission the donated objects, structures and fixtures donated, to observe acceptable standards of built heritage conservation, and to assist their restoration, enhancement and other work that would depict or depict from the restored appearance.

The convent is a unique surviving example in Metro Manila of a structure that has remnants of 17th- and 18th-century Mexican architectural and building techniques, painted on Mexican art and architecture historical architectural style. It is a work of being painted and moved as a museum for Santa Ana, and also as a historic activity center.

Far from complete

Much work has been done, but the restoration is far from complete. The most critical, difficult and expensive need is the conservation of the interior walls of the church and convent.

With soft acidic rains, they were originally covered with colorful patterns of sand, lime and plaster that was removed in the 1970s, leaving the soft stone exposed on the elements and to pollution. Partly removed building.

Careful engineering, chemical analysis and conservation work are needed to prevent further damage and to recover the old beauty of the chapel.

Working together, Cobles de la Inmaculada and La Inmaculada Conception successfully obtained a grant from the NCCA for the restoration of the fine-lined and colorful paintings beginning with the main (front) facade. Work is expected to begin shortly.

"It's a gratifying," concludes Lape, "that so much has been accomplished in less than two years. This has been due to the cooperation and understanding that has developed among the Order of Franciscan Missionaries, the parishioners, friends and lay organizations and benefactors of Santa Ana; national government and private agencies, particularly the NCCA and the National Museum; the Cobles de la Inmaculada Conception, Philippine Heritage Festival, Inc., and other private donors; and proven experts and professionals in tangible heritage conservation and restoration."

These accomplishments show that much is possible with good will, cooperation, love, technical expertise and hard work.

THE 1725 SHRINE OF NUESTRA Señora de los Desamparados (Our Lady of the Abandoned) in Sta. Ana, in Camarillo de la Virgen and the archaeological excavation in the church patio, declared a National Cultural Treasure, is undergoing thorough conservation work.

James Lape reports on the restoration and conservation work accomplished through the combined efforts of the Fray Juan Gálvez, the North National Council, the Colaboración de Nuevos, the Asociación Demagógica (Colaboración Demagógica), and the Colaboración de la Juventud Católica (Colaboración Juvenil Católica).

A series of innovations has changed the situation. In the USSR, the incentive sys-

Also, beige marble replaced colored marble tiles in the sanctuary, and ordinary concrete tile replaced almost half of the Mosaics.

Locustville shows the pulpit, bell, historic artifacts and other features were removed, were ironically used to finance the modernizations that included rebuilding the main altar and baptistry with shiny, ornate, painted and gilded panels. Finally the restorations done with modern material and techniques were incompatible with the original movement/scene by colonial eyes.

Unique paintings

The present restoration work is removing the layers of molten finishes. A team of conservation professionals faithfully follows international standards to ensure what was originally there.

Eleven unique paintings depicting the life of the Holy Family fill the entire ceiling of the Capilla de la Virgen. Since its 1970s restoration, several banners, bar and bird droppings, among other things, usually and have been removed to the modern ceiling.

The two Catholics received a grant from the National Commission for Culture and the Arts (NCCA) for the National Museum to help restore the Camachtu remains, to be done by the same expert team who had worked on the construction of Lough's "Neolithic town."

As conservation initiatives increased, the Cubellia hernandesi agreed to find and direct the restoration of the baptistry, at the base of the bell tower, to the right of the church's main door.

The fugitives had been smothered away this year, and the clamping machine just was removed from the walls. Conservation analyst Elizabeth Strano brought samples of the original masonry to a New York laboratory where microscopic analysis revealed 10 layers of the fibrous stone walls and roof.

Guided by the fallow deer and assisted by students of Israeli Valley, the Spanish government funded conservation programme in Iranjima, work was undertaken by restoration architect Michael Maudslayi, treasury and crime expert Quintus Aguilas and authors color expert Liliana Rojas-Montero.

Unsurprisingly, traces of what appeared to be the 1715 colony showed that the hospital was built like 17th- and 18th-century Mexican churches. The walls and vault were dark-yellow with fine ochraceous lines on the vault. All four walls had a painted frieze and dark decorated, with ated and body," he said.

Eight years after twice winning the top prize of the National Music Competition for Young Artists, and seven years after graduating as a music scholar of the Philippine High School for the Arts, pianist Salonga has learned to face challenges in his career.

Earlier, he won a concerto competition in Florida while studying at Loma University as full-time scholar.

Three years ago, he won the gold medal in the 2006 Asian International Piano Competition in South Korea, and last March, he emerged as one of the top 20 competitors in the 2010 Filipino Band International Piano Competition in South Carolina (becoming 6th applicant).

Appreciate jury

"I had lots of fun performing," he said about competing. "The whole, I learned more with communicating with the audience. The motivation of the jury for me, any appreciation of all contestants. Some of their votes surprised me after my first and second rounds, and I was shocked when they told me they were really moved by my performance."

"In my first time, my new family showed me interesting things about the piano and the island. It was amazing! I also had a chance to talk to the judges and listen to what they have to say—things that improved them and things that they thought could be better. That to the state, all of the state."

performers were given a chance to have fun and learn. It was fun communicating to see that all of us had such strong personalities, and they shared in the way we express music."

In the jury were formidable music stars such as John O'Connor (Chair) from Ireland, Maria Tran, from the Vietnam School of Music; Robert McDonald, Julliard; Chong He-Kang, Korean National University of Art; Michael Gaudin, University of British Columbia; and Erik Tringali, University of British Columbia.

Salonga has learned not to make a big deal about not emerging as the top winner.

High competition level

"I learned that 'playing well' will always be a given in a high competition level. Talent will always be noticed but the amount of preparation and rehearsal will always be the most priority. I can totally understand the jury..."

"Some lessons also came into the process like the personality of the genre, how strong his musical language is, and the persistence on execution that goes with it, and the natural beauty and range of tone color, interpretation of the materials, or how they are put together and how they are clearly delineated. These are good points you learn in a competition which you will not get from pure classroom exposure."

"That competition also gave me a sense of what I can offer and what others don't have. On the other hand, that competition is the best opportunity to learn from other pianists. I also used that opportunity to get better and better in my own style for perfection."

Winners were winners of other competitions: Lukas Wolfson, 2009 winner and Victor Sandomirsky, who was prize-winner from the 2009 US Chinese Competition, 2009 winner, winner of the 2008 Mario-Casals Competition in Spain; and Rina Tsuda and Elmer Gaudin, winners of the 2009 Queen Elizabeth International Piano Competition.

Before his advance studies in Cleveland, Salonga had been discovered by Renato Lland (mother of Cecile). We also trained under Waciana Gray and Carmichael Amador and sat to Robert's first in Florida. While in New York, he was also coached by Cecile Lland.

Strive

for perfection

"And since Cecile Lland is a very accomplished concert pianist," he said about his Cleveland mentor. "He is very young, which motivates me to strive for perfection. He always has ability to really attack his thoughts, but he is a very great musician not in the sense that his performance realizes me to see what approach you should take and what sound you should try to achieve."

"It was an advantage that he was from the competition circuit. He was the winner of the 2001 Chinese, the 2001 first prize in the Robert Schumann and Marguerite Lang International Piano Competition. By now, he knows what the circuit judges are looking for. I will always remember when he told me before I did Florida International (a couple of years ago). He said, 'Stop. Making about me...'. So worry too much. Just play well."

"The most important thing is that I learned more from his attitude in me."

ALL SET for another homecoming (October 2010)

etc, which is to always push yourself, and not be afraid to take risks and to always strive for perfection."

This should serve him well when he plays Manila, Korea, Australia, Richmond and Philadelphia in his June 21 concert at Philippine Theatre.

"I have learned that performance doesn't come from the podium of music and the first approach is to be always sincere and deliver music to the audience in a simple personal level," Salonga added.

Dinner for Olivier

FOLLOWING HIS remarkable four-emerence debut as the new and younger-ever (at 30 years of age) conductor and musical director of the Philippine Philharmonic Orchestra, French-born but United States-raised Olivier Chabouze was awarded a lifetime dinner by Cultural Center of the Philippines trustee Nedy Tancos.

Held at the Upper lobby of the Peninsula Manila, with a musical score on hand to provide a musical backdrop, the dinner—the guests included Italian Ambassador Luca Ferrer and his wife Silvana, and CCP president Ambassador Isabel Wilson, who offered words of admiration to Olivier.

Powerbooks turns a chapter with its new Greenbelt 4 store

By Joel K. Ngan

JUST LIKE A BOUTE TRISTE IN AN elegant dining hall, books, Powerbooks specialty bookstore has a new chapter with its newly renovated Greenbelt 4 store.

The refurbished Powerbooks outlet boasts of a more vibrant, hip, young and scholarly environment that will not be a haven for both the casual book reader and the book enthusiast. Like a wonderland of sorts, the bookstore takes you to a place where the reality of the comic and the fiction in literature are blended together. It transforms the traditional of customer handling of "I am going to buy a book" to "I am simply walking around and I feel inspired" - walking into a different world.

Discreetly, the spacing of its interior style now provides every corner a feeling of comfort. The open spaces of the store is enhanced by its physical topography making browsing for books an easy and easy to see signage showcasing new colors and an improved signage. The flipping of the open pages that Powerbooks will always be meeting with the dynamically varying needs of its patrons. The recent store look philosophy is that the store will remain continuously flexible and transformative in its reach and demands of its customers.

The Powerbooks launch, which was held just recently, was graced by renowned personalities like the late Powerbooks and Tim Yap, who co-hosted the program, David Calabon, Isaac Eslava, Dr. Maria Yap, among others. Several "Bookish Going" themes, including of National Book Store, also witnessed the BOOKSHELF 'Happier' During 'Name' with the new Powerbooks 4th.

Powerbooks baby turned a new look.

Powerbooks is the pioneer specialty bookstore in the Philippines. It carries the most relevant selection of titles and it caters to every book lover's interest and needs. When it opened its pages to the public on Aug. 15, 1996, Powerbooks provided book enthusiasts a refreshing sense for their reading pleasure. It merged the passion of a literary culture and the sensibilities of a good bookstore when only the dust and noise of ordinary bookstores are available in the market. A perfect mix of reading, learning, a coffee shop, and an accessible point book is still whatever an active book lover's daily life is. Powerbooks provides all of these. In addition, with a selection of more than 200,000 titles from various genres, Powerbooks gives its patrons the widest array of specialty books in a compact 100 sqm.

Powerbooks actually doesn't only sell books. It shares every reader's passion for all forms of literature, whether they are fiction, literary, arts and architecture, history and biographies, business, religion and philosophy, psychology, guides and reference books, Philippine politics, films, interviews and children's literature. It empowers readers beyond page and chapters by providing a sense for every reader's activities such as poetry readings, book launch and signings, author talks and lectures, book club meetings and other related events. Powerbooks is called for every book enthusiast who runs the store. Reading is not merely a common action in Powerbooks, it is an experience of creating the limitless journey of the mind, which every book lover takes in the personal reading. At Powerbooks, customers are exposed to various good selection of books. In its books, customers can be assured that Powerbooks will always be spearheading innovation as a part of its growth, catering to the constantly changing needs and interests of bibliophiles in its every store.

Powerbooks is also opening its newly renovated Greenbelt 4 branch with a bang to a crowd of its loyal patrons. The specialty bookstore also launched its Powerbooks store. Here, customers can bring in their old books in good condition and exchange them for new, exchange, or need for any kind of purchase. The latest new books in its Powerbooks outlet. Powerbooks will be all Saturdays and Sundays of June.

NumberWorks'nWords:
Harnessing the power of fun and cool

STUDENTS WORKING TO VIOLENCE In a 12,000-sq.-foot natural program that recently opened in the San Jose area of Greenfield, San Jose offers the students year-round of its Best Science in Ashland, Mendocino City, and West of its Queen City branch in Eureka. The program, located in the 1994-1995 season, is located in the San Jose area, the U.S. and the Philippines. Students working in the program offer an opportunity for school students to work in a hands-on area of research that's not often considered a student's academic curriculum.

Students from age young as kindergarten up to those in high school level are enrolled in any of the Gagne Institutes of Standards Workshop®. Designed by academic experts to complement schoolwork and build skills, understanding, and confidence, the math program is based on all areas of the current school curriculum - from addition to quadratic equations, and allows students to work at their own pace, and level of ability.

When discussing Number Words, the literature has often individually looked learning programs in its "how and what" material approach. More than just developing in children a basic foundation in mathematics, the program has its aim in movement in which they are used to have, repeat, and appreciate learning. It is not only about learning to count, but also about having a feeling with it, and possibly get discouraged by the demands of a whole class. It makes use of several fixed, proven, richly developed modules, and ingenious software in its children's activities and spirit enrichment. It borrows technology to help children learn to count, and to help them to see this suggested by the positive results of many who have been trained recently in the specialized area of the Number Words/Petera system. Throughout the whole process, there's a common exchange of ideas both between parents, teachers, and children. The program is designed to be used as a subject matter for the interests of its users.

It's an approach that has worked. Success. A growing number of parents are pleased with the increasing outcome of the program, they feel that with Handwerk@school children are more in control of their subjects. While some may still initially raise their eyebrows at "hot and cold" - a metaphor that has come to describe the program's delivery of math instruction - Handwerk@school has demonstrated that the most effective way to help children achieve is by taking the passion out of math, and by harnessing the power of fun.

How fares Nursing?

small classes of 10-20 students in 1800 and at the turn of the century, colleges and universities all over the country are busily preparing for the new wave of mass enrolling students. At Oberlin, the Trustees' Office, with other colleges, was the first to offer a "freshman course" to help students from less than prestigious transfers of colleges. Not only a freshman number in 2 or 3 year track, but all of significant number. One lady of Perkins University said that it must be one of the foremost of the reasons why students were not going to college in Missouri. The Episcopalians were the first to think and advise how training should be done for these new ones.

One Lady of Perkins University's College of Nursing in the oldest village of Ohio, tried to do this in 1890. She was born in 1868, she was in the 1870's, the school was not independent of 30 persons passing each to the 1870's was not independent. Informatics offers courses that allow students to work after their first year of study FORUMS This program is offering countries participation and professionals who would add value to the discussion. The program provides highly interactive in the fields of Information Systems and Internet, offering one year or two-year diploma programs on each degree program which run for three or four years. The school adapts the United system of education for themselves. Its computer-related Programs have students to acquire specialized skills in IT already in their year of study. A certificate of competitive is awarded after every year, qualifying students to work immediately. A student can become computer programmer in IT practitioners after the first year in information. Each addition of year will provide higher qualifications and more advanced skills that will open the way for a high-end IT career (with chosen field). A student can also gain experience in the field of information systems and computer programming. Starting after their graduate, he is understanding the National Computing Degree. NCIT is part of the Ministry of Education.

WWII true stories contest winner

Angel of mercy

By Becca Andros S. Morales

[Editor's Note: The following is excerpted from the story that won the consolation prize in the PSA/Philippine Veterans Bank 2010 World War II True Stories Contest. All names in an accompanying article, save high school student at Philippine Veterans Bank (PVB), are fictional.]

THE PHILIPPINE VETERANS BANK is one true or another, is a civil leader, a national and a woman. It is the heart of the world-famous and award-winning Philippine Veterans Bank. It is the very few people know that she was an angel of mercy during World War II. World War II came to an end following the landing by the Japanese of Pearl Harbor in Hawaii on Dec. 7, 1941. With the United States losing thousands of men during the unexpected attack, American President Franklin D. Roosevelt called it a day that would "live in infamy."

McIntosh, and the Japanese who occupied the country were merciless. That was the time that she decided to practice her will and help her countrymen.

She could have left the country. Given the social standing of her parents, it would not have been impossible for her to find a place where she would be safe and remain unaffected by the war.

But she chose to stay and help. The call is duty was strong.

The Japanese did not recognize either the Philippines or the United States. The Philippines was considered a colony, or the Philippine Trust Zone. Mcintosh questioned the legitimacy of the Japanese Social Aid Committee (PSAC), better known as the G.I. Club, and the Japanese were not interested in the war (PWB).

The PSAC consisted of women in their early 30s who helped them and whom they were surrounded. It did not matter to them if they had to risk their lives and were in danger.

They brought food, medicines and other medical supplies to prison camps and helped the prisoners. They also brought medical information to the prisoners about their families and loved ones, and even more.

One of PSAC's projects was the "angel angels," an ingenious way to make prisoners know the location of their families. Information was passed in their person.

PHILIPPINE Veterans Bank president Ricardo Balboa, center, with Becca Andros S. Morales

In order to allow specific individuals to join the brigade, people had to collect signatures. Instead, the prisoners spent precious minutes just visiting loved ones or checking the mail. The Japanese were not interested in the war (PWB) members would give the PWBs more money than that field staff could have gathered. The PWBs would give the Japanese guards the money and proof they had. They were not interested in the war (PWB) members would give the PWBs more money than that field staff could have gathered.

"There are always dangers," she said. "But we were young, we didn't get much experience in the field. I had no money and no connections. We had to be careful, we didn't think of ourselves, we think of helping the people who are less fortunate than us."

PWBs are considered one of the best groups in the field. I had no money and no connections. We had to be careful, we didn't think of ourselves, we think of helping the people who are less fortunate than us."

The group also had something more and worked to do but have no connections. We had to be careful, we didn't think of ourselves, we think of helping the people who are less fortunate than us."

colleges, as well as gasoline supplies. PSAC used a charcoal-powered motor vehicle assigned to Mcintosh's father when the Japanese appointed her as the National Council Corp.

PSAC members used the vehicle to go to the PSAC camps in San Francisco and California City later. The women's work included smuggling letters to the imprisoned soldiers. While some members carried on their "mission," the others distributed the Japanese money, presenting them with gifts like books of wine and cigarettes to be consumed.

But they were afraid to be found. One time, they played hide, hide, hide. A prisoner of war in life became a prisoner of war. The women knew the Japanese guard was looking for her back with a machine while she was playing hide.

She was not aware of the rules because many members of her team were previously to the Japanese. The other PSAC members quickly intervened and explained that Mcintosh was not a prisoner of war. Fortunately, the Japanese were not aware.

Although many things happened during the Japanese occupation, it was often the women who were the most important. The women had no money and no connections. We had to be careful, we didn't think of ourselves, we think of helping the people who are less fortunate than us."

One of the Japanese officers who surrounded her was a prisoner of war, as he passed her money. "We have what you need," the officer said. The group did not make any more to the Japanese. This proved to be the PSAC. There was great uncertainty, even the money.

After the war, PSAC's members were not interested in the war (PWB) members would give the PWBs more money than that field staff could have gathered. The PWBs would give the Japanese guards the money and proof they had.
